

Grant Wood, American Gothic | 1930,
The Art Institute of Chicago Museum

The painting of "American Gothic" it's from 1930 painted by Grant Wood. Now it is situated in Art Institute of Chicago Museum. In the picture you can see it's a warm, sunny day. The marriage is standing in front of church. The lady on the painting is around fifty years old. She has blue eyes and blond hair. She is looking with some fearfully at something in the distance. She's wearing a black dress with a brown vest on it. She has got a gold brooch in the middle of white collar on her neck. The man in the painting is around sixty. He has a white shirt and light blue overalls. He has also dark blue jacket and gray narrow glasses. We can see that he's holding fork and he's looking at us with certain mystery. He looks like he doesn't feel anything, that's why painting gives us quite disturbing vibe. Everything looks calm and peaceful, but we can see that the couple is hiding something and it's nothing positive.
