

ROGER FRY

PORTRAIT OF EDITH SITWELL

In the picture u can see woman who is wearing a black dress. She looks quite depressed. Her expression is grim. She gently holds kind of a necklace in her hand and also she has got a ring on her finger. It's possible that these items have some sentiment for her, and obviously that black outfit symbolizes her bad mood. Something unpleasant seems to have happened in her life. It's her expression, the colours - that's what indicate it. Black colour is associated with a funeral, but this is only an assumption. Her hair is very neatly pinned up, so it's quite possible that she was getting ready somewhere. Maybe this lady just thought for a while. Actually it's hard to tell.

Did sth bad happen in her life, is she just pensive – we don't know

Why we tried to imitate any famous painting?

We thought it would be a great experience, also we've learned sth about this British painter. Even of that we took part in "European Day of Languages". It came a little bit funny sometimes, we got some problems (mostly while taking picture) but in our opinion we did a great job :).

Sth about the author

British painter of the 19th century, created mainly realistic portraits original ↗ imitation ↖

